

Operation Kindness Humane Society Seeks Fosters and Volunteers During Kitten Season

Kitten season, running from March through October, brings an influx of kittens to shelters and requires more community support

Spring is here, and so is kitten season. With the influx of kittens in North Texas, Operation Kindness Humane Society is seeking additional hands to help care for the young cats.

Kitten season refers to the period when cats reproduce prolifically, typically beginning in spring and peaking during the warmer months. Without intervention, this can lead to an increase in homeless kittens, exacerbating issues related to overpopulation and straining resources within animal shelters.

Operation Kindness Humane Society's main shelter in Carrollton houses a 24/7 neonatal kitten nursery that runs year-round. In 2025, their nursery assisted nearly 800 underage kittens and looks forward to helping even more pets this year.

Volunteer at the Neonatal Kitten Nursery

Operation Kindness Humane Society is always looking for new volunteers. If you have a love for kittens, then volunteering at the organization's neonatal kitten nursery would be the perfect fit for you. During kitten season, volunteers are essential to keeping the nursery running smoothly, allowing the organization to aid as many kittens as possible.

Fostering a kitten with Operation Kindness Humane Society

The organization encourages community members to join its foster team and help kittens thrive in a home setting. Whether it's bottle-feeding orphaned kittens, caring for a nursing mom cat and her babies, helping kittens learn to eat solid food, or assisting them in growing big and strong to receive their spay/neuter surgery, every hand helps.

No experience is necessary to foster, Operation Kindness Humane Society provides plenty of training and support for fosters, ensuring that you feel prepared and comfortable when you take home a kitten. Any supplies such as food, medicine, toys or bedding will be provided for fosters.

To apply to be a foster, visit the organization's foster page at <https://www.operationkindness.org/foster/>.
